

Contents and Executive Snapshot

The official YES exemplar is a quality reference, but this report follows the fuller 17-point marketing structure shown in class. That means the final document includes market analysis, PESTEL, Ansoff, a marketing budget and a sales-monitoring plan.

Report Structure

1. Description of product or service
2. Vision, mission statement and values
3. SMART business objectives
4. Market analysis
5. Customer analysis
6. Competitor analysis
7. PESTEL analysis
8. SWOT analysis
9. Ansoff matrix
10. Marketing assumptions
11. Marketing objectives
12. Marketing mix
13. Sales forecast
14. Contingency plans
15. Marketing action plan
16. Marketing budget
17. Plan for monitoring sales

Brand Snapshot

UVP

Fresh like juice, functional like a protein drink

LAUNCH GOAL

2,340 bottles in 6 months

CHANNELS

Campus, gyms, cafes and pre-
orders

Pilot Findings

- 42 local respondents trialled the concept through surveys and tasting conversations.
- 86% said most protein drinks taste too thick, chalky or artificial.
- 79% wanted a faster breakfast or recovery option they could drink on the move.

● 67% said they would buy a fruit-protein drink weekly if the price stayed under NZD 7.

Core Message

A juice-first protein drink that feels fresh,
functional and easy
to finish.